More Rotten Sticks.—Our esteemed of Greenbrier has again, otemporary of Greenbrier has again, with a legal acumen worthy of a profeswith a legal acumen worthy of a proces-sional expert, essayed to prop a cause that smells very strong of rottenness, with ar-gumentative supports that betray most alarmingly symptoms of chronic unsound-ness. Repeating the assertion already disposed of, that the negroes are not taxdisposed of, that the negroes are not taxed, he adds that the present Constitution does not provide for their representation. In reply, we beg his attention to article 1, section 7 of the Constitution, "Every Ciferen shall be entitled to equal representation in the Government, and in all apportionments of representation, equality of onments of representation, equality of numbers of those entitled thereto, as far under the Fourteenth Amendment, accepted by West Virgins, in not the negro a citizen, and make the Flick Amendment a clitzen and node: the Filek Amendment recently adopted, does not our Constitution make him a citizen? It is not necessary to be an opponent to the Constitution, to settle that question.

The 9th section of Article 4, on which our cotemporary rests his position must be constructed as conflicting with the recognized "Supreme law," and as there-tore null and void.

Again regarding the reform of the Judiciary, the law's delay is the great complaint. We are persuaded that the har has the corrective entirely in its control; moreover a speedy execution of jus tice may be secured by the institution of county judges of competent jurisdiction, holding monthly sessions.

We think the present system of giving Justices pay in fees, to be as sale as paying lawyers in fees. A corrupt justice may be bribed under any system.

The Constitution only provides six officers in each township. A few of them officers in each township. A few of them receive nominal compensation. We consider the township system as the model of local self-government and eminently American and Democratic. Objection is made to the ballot. We reply, God help the poor citizen abould its friendly shelter to the compensation. be torn from his homestead! Does any be forn from his homestead! Does any sane man believe that any proprietor in the Greenbrier Valley would hesitate to annihilate an unfortunate dependent who would dare to oppose his will by a manly () viva-voce 'No' at the polls? Nobody in Monroe believes that with a Christian laith, we know. It will not take twenty isith, we know. It will not take twenty years, as our cotemporary says, to put fifty amendments through the Legisla-ture. Article 12 of the Constitution places no restriction on the number that may be proposed simultaneously.

Mr. Greeley's Reception in the South.

From Tilton's Golden Age.
The reception of Horace Greeley at the South was primarily the recognition of personal worth, and that heroic and or personal worth, and that heroic and commanding devotion to great principles of national policy which have won the respect of all respectable men, of all parties and sections of the country. But, in the second place, it was a spontaneous expression of the feelings of the Southern people toward Northern Ideas, industry seed institutions. He stands a one of the and institutions. He stands as one of the and institutions. He stands as one of the most conspicuous representatives of that enterprise which has built up the West; that diffusion of capital, that scattering of populations, that planting of manufactures, tounding of cities, and developing of natural resources, which have made the Northwest what it is in the nation, and adulate the resources in the patient of the control and which, turned into Southern channels, would convert that section into the nels, would convert that section into the garden and glory of America. Leading Southern men, in welcoming Mr. Greeley to their cities with so much cordiality and enthusiasm, meant a great deal more than to pay a merited compliment to an honest politician, a wise statesman, and a distance of the complex control of the constitution of the constit tinguished journalist.

They meant to express their appreciation of the ideas and principles of which he is the advocate, and in his person to welcome emigration, industry, education, thrift, capital, internal improvements, and all the arts and accompaniments of a high civilization. They meant to give the he to the notion, which has been studingly civilization. They meant to give the lie to the notion, which has been studiously circulated and confirmed by the cruelty and baseness of violent men, that the South has a, deep-seated hatted of the North, and will repel every advance of Northern men and methods into their lines. They have sense enough to see that the only hope of the great Gulf States is in the men and agencies that the North contributes, and only as the South opens. the only hope of the great Guil-States is in the men and agencies that the North contributes, and only as the South opens her vast lielas to Northern labor, capital, enterprise, and influence, can she ever be lifted from bankruptcy and barbarlam to independence and refinement. And they put this declaration into such a series of splendid ovations as should forever brush away all saspicion of chronic ill-will and all hereditary antipathy, and convince us that our Southern States offer more and more tempting inducements to Northern capital, labor and emigration, than any other quarter of the globe, and that true men will be welcomed as cordially and treated as well there as anywhere. This is the real significance of Mr. Greeley's tour, and the lesson that comes out of it.

An Illinois man who had his watch stolen from his pocket, and advertised that the their must return it if he would avoid trouble, received before 11 o'clock on the same day three watches, and a letter promising a fourth it he would send
